

TAYLOR STOCKWELL

RESEARCHER AND PROJECT COORDINATOR

"Arlington brings a thoughtful approach to management consulting that uplifts people and organizations to achieve their full potential. It's fulfilling to know I am a part of a firm that ensures people's talents are truly appreciated, developed, and directed to places they can make a positive difference."

Taylor is a Researcher and Project Coordinator at Arlington Partners International. Taylor provides business development, project coordination and administrative support on a wide range of Board, CEO and senior executive mandates. She enjoys contributing to projects by researching talent that matches both the client's needs and organizational values and supports the Chief Executive Officer in ensuring efficient administrative and operational processes.

In her previous roles at Windmill Microlending and ASOntario, Taylor specialized in research, administration, and group facilitation, finding a passion for working face-to-face with people and developing meaningful connections.

Taylor is approaching her final semester of a degree in Philosophy, BAH at Queen's University and spends much of her time at school contributing to the university's music scene.
